SCHOOL

AND

FINANCIAL REPORTS

OF THE

Town of Greenville.

RENDERED MARCH 1st, 1874.

AYER JUNCTION, MASS.:

JOHN H. TURNER BOOK AND JOB PRINTER

1874.

SCHOOL REPORT.

DISTRICT NO. 1. PRIMARY.

Summer Term, 9 weeks.	Number of scholars, 42.
Fall " 9 "	" " 38.
Winter " 12 "	" " 42.

This department has had the same teacher during the year, Miss O. A. Hopkins, who, for nineteen terms, has presided in this division of our village school; if this fact does not speak of qualifications for the place and appreciation by the district, no amount of criticism can. A new feature of the school, during the year, has been the introduction and study of the Book of Nature, in which the garniture of the world we live in, and the earthly house of the mind, is brought to the comprehension of the child. The interest and intelligence of the little pupils in the new study was truly surprising, it was of course a great addition to the labor of the teacher, but she feels amply rewarded by the beneficial results. One other gratifying result of the school was the progress made by the class that has just graduated, for the middle department; it is, we think, a little superior in some respects to any that has left before. We predict for its members a bright, intellectual future. Much progress has been made in reading. Spelling is made a specialty by this teacher, and it has been a rare pleasure to your committee to listen to the correct spelling of these little folks.

DISTRICT NO. 1. MIDDLE SCHOOL.

Summer Term, 9 weeks.	Number of scholars, 28.
Fall " 9 "	" " 33.
Winter " 12 "	" " 21.

Our teacher, Miss Nellie E. Adams, has had the charge of the school during the year.

The teacher was sincerely devoted to the interests of the school, meeting with rare consciousness and decision, its pleasant as well as its unpleasant duties.

The summer term was noted for commendable progress in its various studies, but the winter term (not fruitless of good to the willing and obedient) was much shaken by the prevalence of disease and its attendant panic, also by a few restive members, who very improperly supposed that license to rebel would be thought by the community brave and commendable. The sooner such juvenile ideas are in a proper way removed, the better it will be for our schools, society, local, and the world.

DISTRICT NO. 1. GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Summer Term, 9 weeks. Number of scholars, 32.
Fall " 9 " " " 31.

Miss Mary H. Jewett, teacher. Seldom do we see one so young in a school so exacting in its expectations, being a stranger to us, we confess to a little misgiving, but soon after the opening of the school we dismissed all fear, satisfied she would be mistress of the situation. Her system of drill, in the school room, was of the Normal School type, prompting to self-reliance, directing the pupil to his own resources of reasoning, as to the why and wherefore. At the close of each term the school was noted for its good discipline, its quick comprehension of every subject that came up in review. At the fall term, History was revived, showing a class of fourteen, in which were some fine specimens of memorizing facts. Grammar was critically studied after the most approved style; in mathematics, the recitations were connected with numerous black-board exercises, in which the classes developed surprising quickness of reasoning, and rapidity of illustration. In short, the school, under this teacher, was a success, and we hope her further services may be secured by the district.

DISTRICT NO. 1. GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Winter Term, 12 weeks. Number of scholars, 33.

Teacher, Wm. Moore. Having had occasion so many times to speak of the qualities of this teacher, and of his success, it seems unnecessary simply to recapitulate, for it would only seem to be that, this teacher has had the charge of this division for six consecutive terms. All in the district have had the chance to see him in the school room; they know his skill and aptness as an instructor, they have given their sentiments expression by their influence in electing him so many times to the place.

Suffice it to say, this town has shown no relaxation of interest, or effort on the teacher's part, no diminution of the respect and influence with which he holds his pupils. In mental culture the school stands but little below the High School order; and to a close observer it would readily occur that all that would be necessary to make it such, is, plus the vote of the district, plus a little more money appropriation, plus a permanent instructor who may in addition, have the oversight of the lower schools.

DISTRICT NO. 2.

Summer Term, 9 weeks.	Number of scholars, 10.
Winter " 11 "	" " 16.

Teacher, Miss Clara F. Hadley. This school, always distinguished for its good order and habits of study, did not fall behind in these respects under the charge of this able teacher. She came as a stranger, untried; she returns as one proved and approved. A Normal School graduate, with good natural qualifications, she is prepared to move in a higher grade of school, but ready adaptation to circumstances is a necessary quality in all good teachers. This teacher is not minus this ability, she exhibited much interest in her little charge. The winter was somewhat larger, and brought in more advanced scholars and some higher studies; algebra and astronomy, with some effort at drawing, were characteristics of this school, in which the classes made a very commendable beginning.

The school was in every respect a success, for which we are mainly indebted to the skill and faithfulness of this teacher. We hope the district may be so fortunate as to secure her services another year.

DISTRICT NO. 3.

Summer Term, 8 weeks.	Number of scholars, 16.
Winter " 12 "	" " 23.

Teacher, summer term, Emma F. Davis. This term was in a high degree a successful one, noted for its good order and mental improvement. The term was short in time, but long in good results. No new studies introduced, but the usual ones made more interesting and practical by its competent teacher.

Winter term, taught by Maria M. Adams, a resident of the district, and former pupil of the school. This fact (as in some cases) did not seem to nullify the teacher's influence, but appeared in this case to be one of the qualifications for the place. Her fidelity to the duties of the school was particularly noted. The reviews testified to the faithful labors and impress upon the school.

I have been thus brief in the reports of the several districts and departments, for reasons first, printing costs something; second, our schools are so compact that all who really feel an interest in education may, by personal observation, know of their practical results, their excellencies and defects. The law compelling the attendance of children of specified ages has been, to a good degree, observed. There are obstacles to the enforcement of the rule, especially in a place like District No. 1. Your committee, soon after the commencement of the summer term, called upon some families which were supposed to disregard the law, and from what was seen and heard, became satisfied that in some cases compulsion would be almost impossible. If the law is to be sweeping in its application, then some provision must be made to decently clothe the children of destitute families, (of which there are more or less in every manufacturing place) whereby they may appear respectable in public, and be respected by their fellows in the school-room. The school law, respecting the employment of children by manufacturing corporations, has been observed; the overseers, in doubtful cases, applying to the committee or teachers for the requisite information. No case of delinquency has been noticed by, or reported to your committee, except in one instance, where the boy, expelled from school, has been seen to work temporarily in the mill, which of course was less dangerous than running in our streets.

There has been 130 weeks of public school in town the past year, averaging twenty-six weeks per school, and attended by about 175 different scholars, taught by seven different teachers, two belonging to the town, five out of town. Every term of school has been visited by your committee at least twice, near its commencement and at the close. At our first visit we have endeavored to learn the state of the school, and kindly correct faults, if any existed; at the close we have closely observed the proficiency made during the term. How well we have met the obligations of office we say not.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. C. DODGE,

Superintending School Committee.
